What is Email Marketing?

Email marketing is a marketing strategy that uses email as a tool to deliver commercial messages and generate sales.

Email Marketing

- Email marketing is a form of Direct Marketing.
- It is fundamentally the process of directly reaching either to
 - ‘customers (or prospects) on an in-house list’ or
 - ‘prospects on third-party list (list rental)’
- Using Electronic Mail.

- Email marketing is an effective and measurable way of reaching your contacts or existing customers.
 - Cheaper than any other direct marketing method,
 - email marketing lets you tailor your messages to different types of customers,
 - build customer relationships and drive direct sales.

The Email Marketing's ability to answer:

What

Content based on preferences

When

Communication based on location & time

Where

Personalized Lifecycle
Journeys

- Email Marketing is more personalized today as compared to other kinds of campaigns.
- Customer who receive personalized emails tend to feel special and act swiftly on offers for them.

Advantages of E-mail Marketing

- Simple and Easy to send
- Reliable and Cost effective
- Track-able & Measurable
- Targeted Audience

History

- In 2017, global e-mail users amounted to 3.7 billion users.
- This figure is set to grow to 4.1 billion users in 2021. (Statista)
- Email marketing spending in the United States would grow from 2.07 billion U.S. dollars in 2014 to 3.07 billion U.S. dollars in 2019. (Statista)
- 86% of professionals prefer to use email when communicating for business purposes. (Hubspot)
- 89% marketers said that email was their primary channel for lead generation. (Mailigen)

- 78% of consumers unsubscribe from emails because brands were sending too many emails. (Hubspot).
- More than 21% of all messages are opened within the first hour of sending. (GetResponse).
- 64% of subscribers open an email based on who it's from, compared to 47% of subscribers who open emails based on the topic (the subject line). (The State of B2B Email Marketing report - SuperOffice)
- Emails not optimized for mobile devices get deleted by a majority (80.3%) of users. (Bluehornet)

- In 2017, the average results for email campaigns across industries were:
 - Open rate: 24.79%
 - Average click-through rate: 4.19%
 - Click-to-open rate: 11.88% (SmartInsights)
- 72% of customers open an email due to the discount it offers, and 62% customers open due to the personalized subject line. (Campaign Monitor)
- Subject lines including words like “urgent”, “important”, “alert”, etc. are proven to increase open rates. (Mailchimp)
- Email landing pages that reflect different business objectives have an average conversion rate of around 7.13% across industries. (GetResponse)

1. Open rate = (# of mails opened / (# of mails send- bounces)
2. Click to open rate = (#of unique clicks / #of unique opens) * 100
3. Cost per click (CPC) = cost / total clicks
4. Click-through rate. The percentage of subscribers that opened your email and clicked on a link within that email. = (total clicks / total delivered) * 100
5. Unique clicks. The total number of unique users who clicked on a link.
6. Total clicks. The total number of clicks from users (including those eager beavers who clicked more than once!).
7. Total opens. The total number of times recipients have opened your email (this includes recipients who have opened it more than once).
8. Unique opens. The total number of opens from original, or unique, subscribers. If you target 1,000 people, you can only have 1,000 unique opens.

Biggest challenge in E-mail Marketing

Growing and Retaining Email List

- Consistently growing the list of subscribers is one of the biggest challenges and tricky process for many email marketers.
- While trimming inactive subscribers to lower your undeliverable email rate is a good thing,
- It is also important to add and retain as many active subscribers as possible in order to make sure your marketing is reaching enough people to generate business.

Biggest challenge in E-mail Marketing

Mobile-Friendly Emails

- Approximately, 50-60% of emails are opened on mobile.
- If you are sending out emails that aren't optimized for mobile, recipients will be reluctant to open them.

Biggest challenge in E-mail Marketing

Measuring ROI

- Knowing ROI for marketing efforts depends on the ability to collect and analyze all data from your email marketing.
- Email campaigns are affordable but knowing the value it's bringing back for your brand isn't easy to measure, unless users are driven to an online conversion metric or sale and properly attributed.

Biggest challenge in E-mail Marketing

Improving Email Deliverability

- It's easy to assume that your email will automatically make into the intended recipient's inbox, but this not the case.
- Spam filters are becoming increasingly sophisticated in their ability to detect and block promotional email.
- Now every spam filter functions a bit differently, this means that an email could pass through spam filter A without issue, but then get flagged by spam filter B.

Email Marketing Process

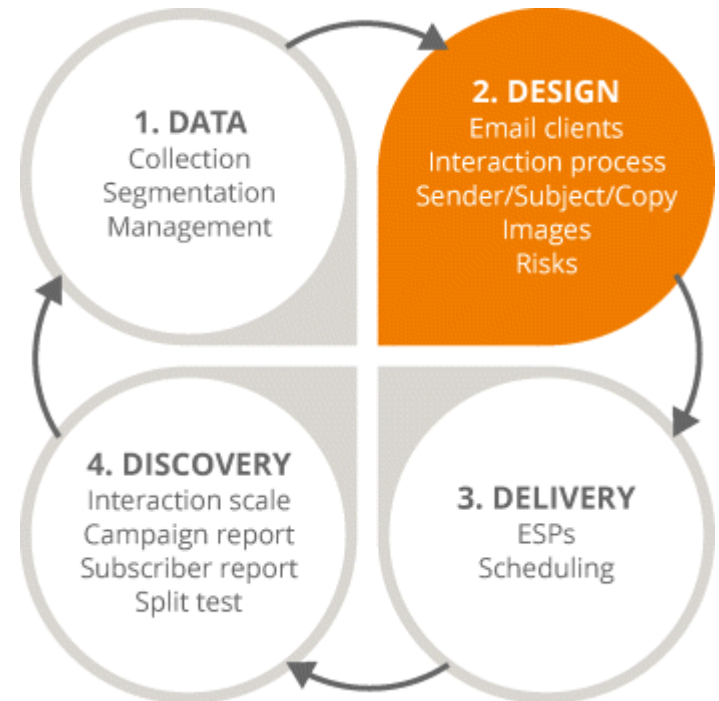

1. Data

- Creation of a subscriber list.
- Compilation of email contacts who have consented to receive your communications (they've opted in).
- Create as many lists as you need in order to segment your subscribers.

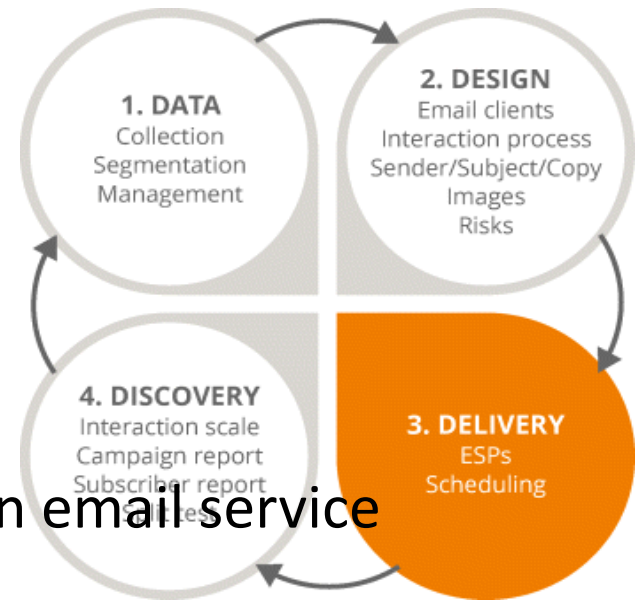

2. Design.

- decide which content you should include in your email and the design principles you must follow,
- to ensure that your email ends up in a subscriber's inbox,
- ready to engage and excite them.

3. Delivery

- The delivery of your marketing emails.
- learn how they are managed through an email service provider (ESP)
- what happens to an email after it has been sent and delivered.
- how to utilize testing to decide what your email should look like and when you should send it to guarantee the best possible open rates.

4. Discovery

- Analysis and reporting are fundamental when revising and refining your digital practices.
- Leveraging analytics tools will allow you to track every cent spent on your email marketing and let you track open rates.
- You will be able to track ROI through CTRs, unsubscribes, and bounce rates.
- Analytics tools are a gateway to highly detailed, clinical data that will enable you to tailor your email marketing strategy, taking into account both your successes and failures.

2.1.1 Types Of Email

Majorly emails can be categorized in to 3 types:

- Promotional
- Transactional
- Newsletter

1. Promotional

- “Intent on Advertising or promoting a commercial product or service”.
- Promotional emails are one of the simplest and effective messages to keep in touch with subscribers.
- Promotional emails can help announce a new product, new offers, deals or promote existing products to your opt -in members.

- Below are few examples of promotional emails:
 1. Welcome Emails
 2. Offer Emails
 3. Event Invitation Emails
 4. Re-Engagement Campaigns
 5. Cart Abandonment campaigns
 6. Post Purchase drip emails (Review request, Refer a friend, Join a loyalty scheme)

Facts and Figures for Promotional emails:

- Welcome emails have on average 4x open rate and 5x the click-through rate as compared to a standard email marketing campaign. (InboxArmy)
- Emails that include some sort of graphics have a higher open rate (26.89%) and higher click-through rate (4.36%) than that of text-based emails. (GetResponse)

2. Transactional

- “Mandatory/Action oriented emails”.
- Transactional emails are generally notifications sent to customers when they initiate any specific activity/event.
- It is a type of triggered email that customers cannot unsubscribe.
- These emails often contain valuable information which are critical to customer experience.

Examples of transactional emails:

1. Password Reset
2. Verification emails
3. Order Summary
4. Event Registration Confirmation

Facts and Figures for Transactional emails

- Transactional or triggered emails have 8x more opens.
(Experian)
- Triggered email campaigns have an open rate of 45.70%, a click-through rate of 10.75% and click-to-open rate of 23.52%.
- The unsubscribe rate and spam rate are as low as 0.58% and 0.06% respectively. (GetResponse).

3. Newsletter

- “Subscription Based Promotional Communication”.
- Email newsletters typically focus more on providing information and less emphasis on sales promotion, which helps businesses establish themselves as experts in their fields.
- Newsletters are generally sent on a set rhythm to maintain uniformity.
- The cadence could be daily, weekly, bi-weekly, monthly, or even annually, based on the preferred sign-up.
- Newsletters content varies with each edition however the format generally remains the same.

Examples of newsletter emails:

1. Tutorial and Tips
2. Brand Stories
3. Content Updates

2.1.2. ESP(email service provider)

- Offers automated email marketing services to businesses which have regular and high-volume email requirements,
- Most Email service providers provide their customers technical infrastructure and offer SaaS (Software as a service) to enable marketers in managing email campaigns and subscribers.

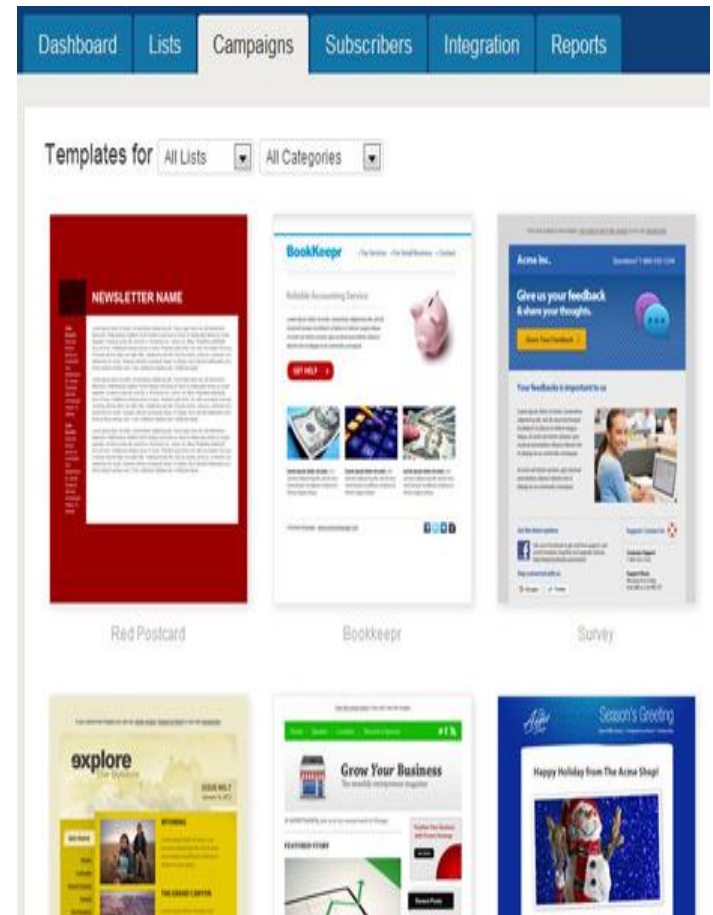

Example: zoho, intercom, cleverreach, sendinblue, ActiveCampaign

- ESPs primary functionalities:
 - Reporting,
 - optimization and
 - marketing automation.
- ESPs secondary services such as:
 - design,
 - testing,
 - sender reputation

What's an Email Marketing System?

Email marketing systems are web-based services that are designed to send mass emails:

- Approved bulk mailers
- Follow professional and legal mailing practices
- Provides subscription management
- User-friendly and typically requires little to no technical skill
- Detailed reporting & feedback

“But can’t I just use Outlook/Hotmail/Gmail?”

Your standard email account (e.g., Outlook, Gmail, Hotmail, Yahoo etc.) is not designed for email marketing

- No authentication = easily get blacklisted or identified as spam
- Can't track clicks or opens
- No automatic bounce removal
- No control over unsubscribing
- No personalization
- Poor HTML

Choosing an Email Management System

Factors to Consider:

- Ease of use
- Availability of templates / ability to create your own templates
- Pricing (Per email? Per subscriber?)
- Ability to segment your lists

ESP Email Marketing Benefits

Deliverability —

- Increase in deliverability, which eventually helps in customer segmentation, nurturing and increased ROI.

Engagement —

- ESPs can provide automated triggered emails with dynamic content, based on customer's action, in a time & cost-effective way.

Reporting —

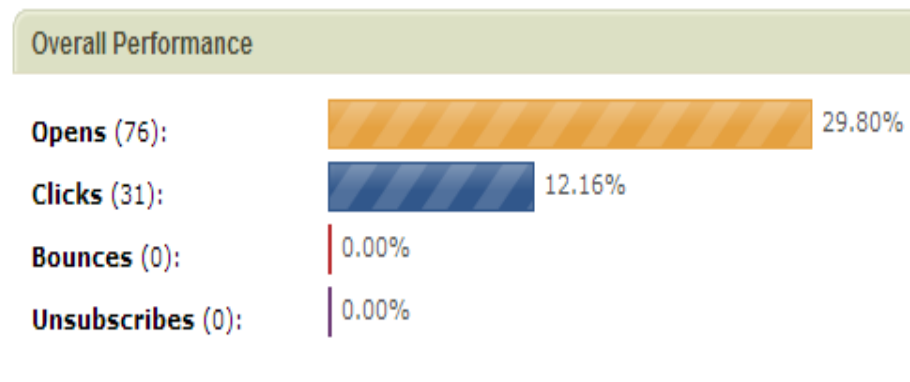

Do people read my emails?

$$\text{Open Rate} = \frac{\text{\# of people who open your email}}{\text{\# of people you sent it to}}$$

$$\text{Bounce Rate} = \frac{\text{\# of emails that can't be delivered}}{\text{\# of people you sent it to}}$$

$$\text{Click Through Rate} = \frac{\text{\# of people who click on a link}}{\text{\# of people you sent it to}}$$

$$\text{Unsubscribe Rate} = \frac{\text{\# Unsubscribe}}{\text{\# of people you sent it to}}$$

List Segmentation —

1. Consider what information you have about your subscribers
 - Location (postal code)
 - Past performances attended
 - Past behaviour (opened/clicked previous emails)
2. Segment your list based on the information
3. Customize your email for each segment

2.1.3. Permission Marketing

- Permission Marketing is the privilege (not the right) of delivering anticipated, personal and relevant message to people who want to get them. --- Seth Godwin

Basis of Permission marketing strategies

- a. Anticipated: People look forward to hearing from you.
- b. Personal: The messages are directly related to individual.
- c. Relevant: The marketing is about something the prospect is interested in.

Steps to get permission from the customers

Step 1: Offer an Incentive.

Step 2: Teach the Prospect Over Time.

Step 3: Reinforce the Incentive.

Step 4: Increase the Level of Permission.

Step 5: Ask for the Sale.

Step 1: Offer an Incentive

- Don't just tell people to email or call you, offer them something for free like a white paper or ebook.
- Offer them something of value that allows them to get to know you and trust you.
- You're offering something that can help solve their problems and they're giving you the ability (permission) to keep marketing to them.

Step 2: Teach the Prospect Over Time

- You're not going to build enough trust after the first interaction.
- You need to keep offering information that your prospects value a great deal.
- As they see you fulfill your promises and provide genuine value, they'll trust your brand even more.
- This information should focus on the types of problems that your product or service solves.

Example: If you sell pool supplies, teach people how to take care of their pool.

Step 3: Reinforce the Incentive

- People become bored incredibly quickly.
- To avoid this and keep your prospects engaged, you'll want to mix things up.
- Don't simply give out the same type of material in the same format.
- By offering a video or a free consultation instead of an ebook, you'll make sure you still have their attention.

Step 4: Increase the Level of Permission

- Usually, this involves asking for more information about your prospect through
 - surveys,
 - phone calls, or
 - consultations.
- Your goal is to convince your prospects to allow you to become more involved with their businesses or lifestyles.

Step 5: Ask for the Sale

- Now that you've proven your worth and have established a deep reservoir of trust with your prospect, close the sale.
- Your products will practically sell themselves because you've already demonstrated that you follow through on your promises.
- This entire process also filters out prospects that will never be interested in what you have to say.
- Everyone that you pitch to will be highly qualified and much more likely to buy.

Seth Godwin suggests five step cycle of getting new customers:

1. Strangers
2. Friends
3. Customers
4. Loyal customers
5. Former customers

Types of permission

- When it comes to email marketing, permission is the act of getting consent from a subscriber to send them commercial email marketing messages.
- There are two types of permission:
 - Implied permission
 - Express permission:

1. Implied permission

- You have implied permission to email somebody if you have an existing business relationship with them.
- This could mean they are a current customer or are an active member of your website, club or community.
- The best way to build an email list of individuals whom you have implied permission to email is by integrating your customer database with your email marketing tool.

2. Express permission

- If you don't have implied permission to email a person, then you'll need express permission to send them campaigns.
- Express permission is granted when somebody specifically gives you permission to send them email campaigns.
- It is done by entering their email address in a subscribe form on your website or entering their details into your in-store newsletter subscribe form.

Concepts of Permission Marketing

Legal: Opt-in, which is permission given by the recipient to receive your e-mail

1. Single Opt-In: Giving your e-mail address in a store or filling an online form

2. Double Opt-In: Clicking on the confirm link in your e-mail or OTP verified

Illegal: Spam Emails

1. E-mail without permission is unwanted e-mail
2. If you keep sending unwanted e-mail regularly, you are spamming!

Why Permission Matters?

Rough estimate of ROI

	Permitted e-Mail List	Non-Permitted E-Mail List
Count	10000	10000
Budget	100	100
Open Rate	4000	200
Click-through Rate	800	20
ROI	12p. Per visitor	Rs. 5 Per Visitor

2.1.4 Subscriber Welcome Plan and Journey

How to Plan & Execute Effective 'Welcome' Emails

- The subscriber provides the email address in exchange for something valuable.
- Here are a few statics that prove the importance of onboarding.
 - You'll lose 75% of your new users within the first week.
 - 40-60% of free trial users will use your product once and never come back.

To do's for 'welcome' emails

1. Device a Strategy

- “Welcome” emails mostly reach the inbox and can create first and lasting brand effect on the recipients.
- They are very important and should be utilized in perfect sense by every company in digital space.

2. Deliver the promise:

- The “Welcome” email must deliver the value for which the customer subscribed.
- This may be in the form of promised e-book, trial period information, discounts or offers as initially promised.
- A welcome email can easily—and warmly—confirm a subscription.

3. Determine a timeline and frequency

- Companies may decide to send more than 1 welcome email as per their marketing strategy.
- This, might increase the brand awareness and gain trust of the subscriber.
- Sending a welcome email is a crucial step.

2.1.5 List Segmentation and Management

- Get permission from the person(prospect / customer)
- Don't trick anyone into signing up.
- The double opt-in: weigh quality over quantity when it comes to email subscribers.
- Keep the lists clean of bounces and from people unsubscribing.
- Check that the content is really valuable to the audience.

- It's a good idea also to maintain one single master list.
- Keep the master list updated, and it can use segmenting to target specific sections of that list.
- Ask the recipient to add the sender email address to their address book to avoid spam filter.
- Make it easy for people to unsubscribe. This way they won't mark emails as spam or file any complaints, and this helps maintain the integrity of your lists.

2.1.6 Personalization and Responsive Design

1. Personalization

- Just because a message is triggered by a software API, doesn't mean it needs to feel as if it's a softer API talking.
- Every single email a customer receives from a company needs to work in unity, especially if they want a customer to come back time and again.
- So, below are a few opportunities companies should use to put a human touch back in their emails.

- Welcome email:
- "Hi, "I'm Mike, "and I'm the person who makes sure "your experience at XYZ "is a good one." And then, let them know it's a two-way conversation. "Have a question?" I'm available any time."

- The support emails:
- "We have received your ticket for this issue, we will get back to you soon".
- "How's that for understanding my concern? I personally detest blank support emails, and would rather not get them. Just let me know when it's fixed. That's what I really wanna write back."

- However, if I get an e-mail back that says: "Hey Mike, "I'm Steve from XYZ, "I just wanted to let you know that we received your issue, "and we'll look into it within next two business days. "I apologize for taking that long, "but I want to make sure we resolve your issue properly. "Thanks for your patience. "I appreciate it."
- Wow. Now I know that someone is on the case, and I can relax. Steve's got it. It's not just lost in a maze of software tickets.

- The Parting emails:
- Notice, in the email, we're personal, we're approachable: "I'd love to earn your business again, "but if not, "it'd be great to know how we can improve our service "in the future. "Thanks Mike, "we hope you enjoyed your time with us!".
- Now, personalizing auto messages is a quick fix, one that you can set and forget.
- Just ensure one thing: that if someone response to the personalized message, they actually get to talk to someone afterwards.

2. Responsive Design

- An email newsletter, which looks superb on desktop, fails to render properly on a mobile device, respondents may either hit delete or unsubscribe.
- The unstoppable change of mobile revolution demands for responsive email design to stay ahead in the online marketing arena, and below are a few more reasons to adopt responsive email design:
 - Enhanced User Experience
 - Increased Conversion Rate
 - Bigger Sales
 - Higher Click-to-open Rate
 - Reduced Unsubscribe and Spam Complaint Rates

Optimize Your Emails for Mobile

- 48% of emails are opened on mobile devices (smartphone & tablet)
- If your email doesn't look good, it will likely get deleted or ignored
- Use a pre-built responsive template or make your template responsive
 - Requires CSS skills

2.1.7 Testing

- All online content can definitely be optimized for benefit from testing.
- Everything from the positioning of an image, to the color of the call to action button, can have a meaningful impact on the conversions.
- Oftentimes, small changes can move the needle, helping to generate more revenue.
- The two most common types of testing techniques are:
 - A/B tests (A/B/n tests)
 - multivariate tests.

A/B Testing

1. Decide which to test & create 2 options
 - Subject line
 - “From” name
 - Email content – design, call to action, text
2. Send each option to a small portion of your list
 - 5-15%
3. See which is more successful & send to the rest of your list!

Resources:

<http://wiredimpact.com/blog/test-nonprofit-newsletter/>

<http://www.slideshare.net/charityexpress/prove-it-ab-testing-for-nonprofits>

A/B testing

- Two versions of a page, version A, and version B, are tested against each other.
- Now where the n comes in is that you can have more than two versions of a page compared against each other at once, so the n would refer to how many versions are being tested.
- Anywhere from two versions to the nth version.

- In A/B/n testing, variant A is the original, and variants B through n will each contain at least one element that is different from the original.
- Users come into the site, they either see the original, or the variation, which is B, where-in the color have changed in the variation, and then they checkout.
- Companies can measure to determine which of these options yields the best result.
- Typically A/B/n testing focuses on changing one element, and this is the least complex method of evaluating a page design.

- Multivariate testing is similar to A/B testing, except it involves comparing more variables, and looking to capture all of the information on how these variables interact.
- The most common example of multivariate testing is when several elements on a page are to be tested.
- The more variations that are needed to test, the longer it's going to take to obtain meaningful data from the test. Once all the tests are completed, a clear picture of what combinations perform best together would be visible.

Social Media Marketing

2.2 Social Media Marketing

- Act of promoting a product or service through the use of social media platforms and websites, such as Facebook, Twitter, LinkedIn and Instagram.

The basic idea of social media marketing:

- publish content that people will engage with, and share, allowing your business to reach new customers.

Interesting Facts

- 3.196 billion people use social media.
- $65 billion was spent on social media ads in 2017
- Internet users have around five social media accounts each
- 95% of Online adults aged 18-34 are most likely to follow a brand via social networking

- 71% of consumers who have had a good social media service experience with a brand are likely to recommend it to others.
- There are now more than 50 million small businesses using Facebook Pages to connect with their customers.
- 78% of people who complain to a brand via Twitter expect a response within an hour.

Why Social Media

- The influence this channel has on how information is received, perceived and shared is profound.
- If a business wishes to stay out of social media, it just cannot stand the risk of losing all those customers who are active on these platforms.
- Meeting friends, engaging in conversations, looking for businesses, finding restaurants or even recommending the best products.
- Therefore, the pull towards social media increased enormously when the services they offered started to expand.

2.2.1 Social AD type and their Design Structure

- Social Media is ever-changing.
- Which social media to choose?
 - Budget
 - Type of business
 - Targeted audience
 - Specific goals

2. Consideration

Website visits

- I want more people to visit a website destination site on LinkedIn.
- Choose this objective to:
 - Drive traffic to your website
 - Drive traffic to marketing landing pages

Engagement

- I want more people to engage with my content posts.
- Choose this objective to:
 - Increase social engagement on your content
 - Increase followers to your Company Page

Video views

- I want more people to watch my videos.
- Choose this objective to:
 - Share your videos with more people
 - Your campaign will be shown to people most likely to view your videos.

3. Conversions

Lead generation

- I want more quality leads on LinkedIn.
- Choose this objective to:
 - Capture leads on LinkedIn
 - Use a lead generation form pre-filled with LinkedIn profile data
- Your campaign will be shown to people most likely to fill out a LinkedIn lead generation form.

Why does building my brand on LinkedIn matters?

- Building a brand further differentiates the business from group competitors.
- It helps to stand out from the crowd and contributes to strong relationships.
- Even when it's a business to business (i.e. B2B) sales, it's important to remember that people buy from businesses they know, like, and trust.
- Thus, strong, mutually beneficial professional relationships are the foundation of any successful business.

benefits of an optimized LinkedIn profile:

- Having a fully optimized profile helps to grow the network, as everyone wants to connect with an attractive profile that positions someone as an expert.
- A fully optimized profile lends stronger credibility and visibility, with key stakeholders and decision makers within the target audience.
- Provides a solid foundation to attract leads and prospects organically and that's separate from any paid advertisements planned for.
- Stand apart from peers and competitors. maintaining the best LinkedIn profile and keeping it accurate and up to date, it demonstrates a serious professional with credible expertise.

To achieve the best results from LinkedIn marketing, below are the action steps:

- One, create an ideal audience profile.
 - This is also known as buyer profile, customer persona or customer avatar.
 - It's a useful exercise for figuring out exactly who the ideal audience is.
 - The audience profile should include age, gender, industry, salary range, challenges, and pain points.
 - The more detailed client profile is, the more marketing message can be refined

- Two, be crisp and clear on the messaging.
 - When targeting a bigger audience, it's important to be clear about the offer value.
 - In fact, the website, the content, and even the LinkedIn profile should clearly answer the question, what specific problems are being solved for the customers

- Three, decide on a list of target companies.
 - Trying to market to everyone on LinkedIn is inefficient, time-consuming, and ultimately ineffective.
 - Instead, one should target the exact companies, specifically researched, because they've demonstrated a need and desire for the products and services provisioned for.

- Four, research specific professionals within those target companies who hold the desired job title(s).

- Five, always reach out with a personalized message to request connections.
 - Be sure to avoid generic or boilerplate messages.
 - Instead, greet the person by name, tell them who you are and what you do, and invite them to connect.

- Sixth, send a thank you note when someone accepts your invitation to connect, and offer them something of value.
 - The value could come in the form of a free strategy session, consultation, downloadable white paper, or link to an informative article that the connection would find value in.

- Seventh, take steps to nurture the relationship so that it eventually moves from online to off-line.
 - Relationship could be nurtured by congratulating the connection on an accomplishment or milestone, making a complementary remark about the profile, or commenting on the content.

- Twitter's advertising platform is a powerful way to advertise online and create brand awareness for a business.
- What exactly makes it so powerful?
 - Well, it's sheer number of users.
 - Twitter has over 330 million monthly active users, and these users send over 500 million tweets every single day.
 - Twitter Ads allows to advertise to the customers directly in a meaningful way, while growing the business and brand awareness.

Reach potential customers

Get your messages in front of people not yet following you by promoting your Tweets

Gain more followers

Quickly grow your community of high value followers and drive word of mouth by promoting your account

Measure results in real time

Track the growth of your follower base and see how people engage with every single Tweet

- One of the most important aspects of Twitter that can be leveraged in the advertising is, the ability to connect in real time.
- Businesses can participate in conversations taking place at the instance that they occur.
- Speaking about real-time connection one can see the trending topics box at the left.
- These are topics that could be used to send the ad campaigns around or just engage in to connect with the customers.
- In addition to connecting in real time, it also provides the flexibility to connect with the context.

Types of Twitter advertising campaigns

- Increase website traffic:
 - People use Twitter to connect with their interests and discover new products.
 - With this type of campaign, businesses are going to drive more traffic to their website, and even increase specific conversions.

- Grow the Twitter followers:

- This is where the businesses are going to build a bigger following and gain more followers.
- This campaign might have the business account show up in the 'who to follow' suggestions.
- And basically, the more the account is promoted, the larger the followers will grow, and the more engaged the followers will be.

- Maximize brand awareness:

- This is going to allow businesses to promote specific tweets that maximize reach and raise awareness for brand's messages.
- It is a great opportunity if brands have something important that they're saying in a tweet, business can actually pay to promote it, for it to show up in front of the targeted audience, and then showcase in front of more people.

- Get more people talking:

- This is very similar to the previous campaign objective, but within this campaign businesses are going to prioritize engagement.
- Research does show that increased engagement leads to brand awareness and substantial increase in sales.
- In order to promote the tweets, brands can start conversations with the audience what they want.

- Instagram is a social media app available for smart phones and it's focused on video and photo sharing.
- The photos and videos posted on Instagram are much more engaging than traditional texts posts that can be seen on other social networks.
- Instagram also allows to quickly edit photos before uploading them to give them a professional look and feel.
- With Instagram, brands can use photos and videos to tell the story of their product or service in a highly visual and engaging way.

- It may be good for small companies as well, but sometimes can be a bit high-priced depending on the industry of the company.
- Businesses can advertise on Instagram in the exact same way that they advertise on Facebook.

- For e.g. If a business does some volunteer work for a local charity, post some photos and videos of that as well so that users can see what the business does outside of simply selling products and services, and how they give back to the community.

Marketing Design on Instagram

- Remember to think of the different ways that products are used, not everybody's going to think of, and try to be as creative as possible.
- It's important to take a look at the competitor's Instagram profile, see what type of content they're posting, and maybe even get some ideas for content that can be posted to own's profile.

Instagram Posting Schedule

- A great idea to developing a posting schedule for any social network including Instagram, is using themed days.
- One of the themed days that's pretty general across all of Instagram is called throwback Thursdays, and uses the hashtag #tbt.
- That's a day when most people post photos of themselves as a child, historic photos, old cars, whatever it may be, but it's a throwback photo.
- A business could post photos of their old products, or maybe what the old location used to look like, or just some history on the organization.

- Businesses might have inspirational Mondays, where they post content that's meant to inspire people for the work week.
- They could have creative Tuesday, where they can show people a creative way to use the product or service.
- If the business is selling a food product they could have recipe Wednesday, where they can post a photo of a final, completed meal, and then provide the recipe on how to make that meal.
- They could also have something like fun Fridays, where they post a fun picture that's intended to get people ready for the weekend.
- Again, this is a great way to get people coming back to the Instagram profile, and allowing them to know what to expect.

Social Media Marketing with Pinterest

Social Media Marketing with Pinterest

- Pinterest is a visual network helping millions of people find new ideas, recipes, style inspiration, and more.
- Pinterest is predominantly avored by women.
- 45% of all U.S. women online have used the network, compared to only 17% of men.
- Users and businesses alike upload pins, images with a link and a caption, to their accounts, and organize them on different boards.
- It is a place for people to store images and information from around the web which they find entertaining, inspiring, and helpful.
- Many businesses are now discovering that they can engage potential customers in new ways through Pinterest's focus on sharing visual content.

- With the power to drive traffic,
- increase brand awareness,
- and target key demographics,
 - a Pinterest account is poised to be an important element of any effective social media marketing strategy for businesses, big & small.

Why Pinterest

- On Facebook, Twitter, and other social networks, posts are often lost in 24 hours, due to the massive amounts of content being shared there.
- But because Pinterest users search for pins, the content might be found months later and continue to drive interaction for the long term.
- To get the content on Pinterest, start by ensuring the images on the website are optimized for sharing.

- Rich pins provide context and help users decide to like, share, or save content.
- With Pinterest, it's important to keep in mind that more content is shared by its users than businesses.
- Encourage consumers to distribute content on Pinterest by hosting a content.
- This can help reach a wider audience with the most engaging Pins.
- With promoted pins, businesses can get top placement on the network and target specific audience demographics.

Tips for Pinterest Marketers

- Register with a business email (and Twitter) on account set-up
- Be worth following, with great visual content:
- Promote your presence externally:
- Create a fan Pinboard
- Demonstrate an expertise on a topic
- Learn about your buyer personas
- Remember videos
- Integration with other channels
- Showcase your people
- Measure traffic back to your website

Targeting Strategy and Planning - Laser/Broad

- Create and execute different kinds of social campaigns, in terms of the technology that brands need to incorporate into their stack.
- There are two essential aspects:
 - the natural organic side of social
 - businesses also need to be active(monitor the social network)

- First, there's the natural organic side of social, where an organization is creating an account, building and engaging with networks, and participating in conversations.
- Must be present in the networks that are most appropriate for them.
 - a Twitter account or
 - a Facebook page or
 - a LinkedIn company page, or
 - depending on the industry, there might be some other great networks
- That are specific to them and their target audience,
- So part of the technology stack will be based on these platforms, and the data inputs and outputs that each provide.

- Second, businesses also need to be active, and should engage, and that means brands must monitor what's going on across these vast networks.
- Some organizations have used social media
 - to get ahead of PR(public relation) issues,
 - to handle customer support, or
 - even to jump on opportunities in the minutes and seconds they start to trend.
- To do this, they probably need to add some social monitoring aspect (i.e. some kind of tools) to their stack.
- These tools run the scope from free to enterprise pricing, and they all have different features, bells, and whistles.

Laser Targeting

- Laser targeting is a popular term in reference with Facebook marketing activity.
- “targeting potential customers based on purchasing behaviors”
- This is done through Facebook's partnership with several different data mining companies.
- These companies possess massive amounts of data (trillions of transactions)
 - from recent credit card purchases, to common products purchased on a regular basis
 - and report back to Facebook to feed the algorithms with user touch points around the web.

Laser Targeting (Powerful Life Events Targeting)

- You can target specific life changing events, where people are more likely to have purchase intent.

Broad Targeting

By creating
Custom Audience,
brands can nurture leads along the marketing funnel

- Broad targeting is a relative term for Facebook marketing, and primarily focused to reach the mass for product marketing and brand awareness.
- Facebook's Broad Category targeting is a simple and easy to use target campaigns.
- Small businesses can take this opportunity to:
 - promote brand to new expats on Facebook,
 - raise awareness, and
 - even offer a “new to town” discount.

- Facebook provides the option to target folks who are “Away from Family” or “Away from Hometown”.

2.2.3 Effective Targeting with custom Audience set-up

- Custom audience can be created when people engage with the brands in some way.
- By installing a pixel on the website, technology can capture that user's Facebook ID, i.e. By pixel capturing their information, brands can create ads that are targeted at those, that have engaged with them.
- Studies show that people are more likely to engage and potentially purchase, if they know the brand or their product.

- For example, a common way to do this is to
 - create an ad, that drives people to their website or blog post.
 - inserting a Facebook pixel(code which captures the info) in your landing page,
 - brands can create an audience of those people that landed on their website pages,
 - then attempt to retarget them with follow up content through ads.
- For businesses, this offers a lot of value.

2.2.4. Campaign setup and reporting on various Social Platforms

2.2.5 Social Split Advertising

- Social A/B testing, also called Social split Advertising, is the process of measuring two versions, which in our case is, social posts, against each other to determine which one performs best.

- A/B testing provides valuable data into audience's thinking and with this information, brands can create an optimized content strategy for each social channel.
- A/B testing can be used for almost everything, for example, it can test your website page formats, email subject lines, ad headlines and blog titles.

What should be tested

- Organic social media allows for testing multiple elements before opting to back up posts or campaigns with spend.
- Test copy & CTAs(click to action):
 - One basic but vital test is contrasting multiple variations of the messaging copy.
 - By using both engagement and performance metrics, brands will be able to quickly figure out which copy variation achieves the best results.

- Test images: Images are another good element to test. Imagery is vital – the clincher even – on social media where posts must stand out to get precious audience attention.
- A basic best practice here is that if one knows which post image and copy performs best, they should build the landing page based on them.

2.2.6 Content Calendar

- A content calendar is basically an overview in calendar form of all the content that is being planned to share and posted on the blog or on various social media outlets.
- The purpose of a content calendar is to plan it out in advance, so brands know exactly what they're posting each day.

- Keep it consistent
- For example, a few brands always publish their blog posts on Monday, Wednesday and Friday morning; that way, the audience knows when to expect them!
- Don't overextend yourself though – if posting 3 times a week sounds like too much, then just start out posting on the same day once a week.
- You don't have to post on all social media platforms.

- Stay flexible

- First major hurdle is accepting that businesses can't do the same thing on every platform.
- Each medium requires content that speaks to that audience,
- Because let's be real, those who follow brands on Twitter are not identical to their Facebook fans.
- This isn't to say that the content cannot be reused,
- But it does mean that it should be amazing and then tuning it to better fit the network it's published on.
